

IT TAKES A JOURNALIST

▶ OUR MISSION

We enable a global network of journalists to provide the trustworthy news essential to free and strong societies.

Their vital work strengthens democratic ideals and spurs change. At ICFJ, we serve more than 160,000 journalists around the world, helping them cover the most critical issues of today, innovate to deeply connect with communities, and build news organizations that thrive.

OUR ADVISORY BOARD

DEAR FRIEND,April 2023*

The International Center for Journalists (ICFJ) has supported independent media since 1984 – a commitment that remains steadfast. It took a journalist then, and “it takes a journalist” now to do the work that free and strong societies demand.

Yet so much else has changed. Today, our world faces rising authoritarianism, disinformation and technological disruptions that have transformed almost everything about the way news is gathered and shared. To meet these challenges and ensure journalists in our network can do their ever-important work, ICFJ is focusing our efforts on three strategic areas:

- ▶ We SERVE reporters and editors, giving them the skills and knowledge to cover the most critical issues of today, from the climate crisis to migration to conflict.
- ▶ We help journalists INNOVATE, using new tools and techniques to build trust and engage with communities.
- ▶ We help independent newsrooms THRIVE financially, adopting effective business models to ensure they can serve their purpose well into the future.

In this report, we highlight just a handful of the journalists in our network – now 160,000+ strong – whose work is making a difference. Their collective impact is immeasurable. We applaud each of them for their commitment to delivering reliable news and information to their communities, and thank our donors who generously back this work.

FIGHTING A GLOBAL SURGE OF DISINFORMATION

Our Disarming Disinformation program works globally to:

Investigate the sources and funding behind disinformation campaigns

Help media use cutting-edge tools to make the facts spread virally

Research the most effective techniques for countering lies

Share findings in eight languages to journalists worldwide on IJNet.org

Work with key news outlets to instill best practices in the fight for truth

ICFJ Knight Fellow Laura Zommer co-launched Factchequeado to bring verified information to U.S. Spanish-language communities targeted by lies. In the run-up to the 2022 elections, she and her team joined with 27 news outlets, including in battleground states such as Arizona, Georgia and Nevada, to debunk falsehoods spreading among Latinos and keep voters informed with the truth.

“I recommend IJNet’s weekly newsletter to everyone. The site has a lot of practical information and real professional advice. In April 2022, I found on IJNet a great training on conflict reporting. Since I live in Ukraine and I write a lot about the Russian war in Ukraine, it was very useful for me to get such training.”

DEEPENING NEWS COVERAGE

From conflict to climate change, ICFJ helps journalists give audiences the vital information they need.

Ukraine

ICFJ grants have helped journalists:

- ▶ Map Russian war crimes
- ▶ Provide vital information on environmental hazards of the conflict
- ▶ Produce award-winning documentaries on the invasion's impact on ordinary people

“ I wanted to tell how artists, musicians, volunteers, soldiers, public figures, and local government worked during the war, and how they help preserve Ukrainian statehood and independence. ”

Sub-Saharan Africa

The Africa Women's Journalism Project, led by ICFJ Knight Fellow Catherine Gicheru, works in seven countries to increase data-driven coverage of issues vital to women, and to help female journalists move to leadership positions.

“ Through your programs, women victims of gender-based violence have the courage to approach us for early care in the health facilities. ”

—MBOJI AÏSSATOU SENE, PRESIDENT OF A SENEGALESE HEALTH WORKERS GROUP, SPEAKING TO A RADIO JOURNALIST IN ICFJ'S PROGRAM

SHAPING THE FUTURE OF JOURNALISM

ICFJ advances media innovation centered on building trust with communities.

United States

Susannah Locke and her former colleagues at Vox developed transparency features for their news site, such as author bios and Q&As, to show how and why stories are reported. She was among 34 journalists from six regions of the world who took part in ICFJ's Leap Solutions Challenge on building audience trust.

“ The program being so intense and immersive allowed me to build a pair of trust glasses. They're always out, and I see trust opportunities everywhere now. ”

Hong Kong

As an ICFJ Knight Innovation Fellow, Tinshui Yeung researched how independent news organizations forced out of Hong Kong could operate effectively in exile. Several Chinese-language outlets adopted the cutting-edge tools he recommended, so they could pay their reporters safely and defend against authoritarian attempts to erase their journalism from the internet.

Brazil

ICFJ Knight Fellow Sérgio Spagnuolo's social media listening platforms are helping news outlets and others in Brazil and the U.S. analyze political discourse on social networks. Tools like Political Pulse aggregate posts from trusted sources while filtering out message that are part of disinformation campaigns.

Protecting Women Journalists

As women journalists around the world face brutal online attacks, ICFJ's research division, in partnership with the University of Sheffield, is developing an early warning system to help keep digital harassment from escalating to real-world violence.

Tibisay Zea is reaching Spanish-speakers in the U.S. with accurate health information through Salud, the podcast she launched with ICFJ’s support. Before the first season finished, Zea had attracted financing from Boston’s public health commission.

“ I applaud ICFJ’s commitment to helping journalists of color tell important stories to the communities they serve. ”

Brazil

Leandro Galante’s news outlet in southern Brazil, O Estafeta, has provided local and regional news coverage since 1991. Through an ICFJ program, he and his team grew their monthly website visits from 21,000 to 142,000 in three months — an increase of nearly 700%.

“ The program motivated us to set and achieve ambitious goals. Today, we produce and deliver excellent content to our communities. ”

HONORING JOURNALISTS

Each year, ICFJ recognizes outstanding journalists whose news reports and analyses have had tremendous impact. For ICFJ's Tribute to Journalists 2022, we held our first in-person gala since before the pandemic and broadcast the event to a worldwide audience. Jonathan Capehart, of The Washington Post and MSNBC, served as master of ceremonies for an evening that brought together media luminaries, corporate and foundation leaders, journalists and friends of ICFJ to celebrate the importance of quality journalism. In 2022, we recognized the journalists below.
